BUSINESS UPDATE

Directors are pleased to announce that Kurion Technologies advised today that it has secured three separate sales contracts for liquid waste treatment plants worth in total about £1,475,000 (about $2,950,000).

The largest is a €1,000,000 (about $1,780,000) plant for reclamation of oil from a waste water stream, for installation in Germany. In addition, two significant projects have been secured in Mexico:

- A vacuum evaporation water recycling system for John Deere Tractors
- An integrated waste treatment system for Hilti Corporation

The contract in Germany should be 80% complete in the year to December 2009, the latter two should be fully completed by this time.

The total value of new orders secured so far in 2009 by Kurion now exceeds $4,700,000.

Kurion Technologies Limited is based in the U.K. and is 51% owned by Electrometals Technologies.
